The Lingo Lab is a place at Michigan State University where people learn new things.

We ask a lot of questions, like:

How do kids learn language?

Why do some kids have trouble learning?

What we can do to make learning easier?

The people who work at the Lingo Lab are called researchers. They love hanging out with kids and learning new things!

The Lingo Lab is in the Oyer Speech and Hearing Building on the MSU campus.

When I visit, we can park right outside.
There will be someone inside to welcome me
and show me where to go.

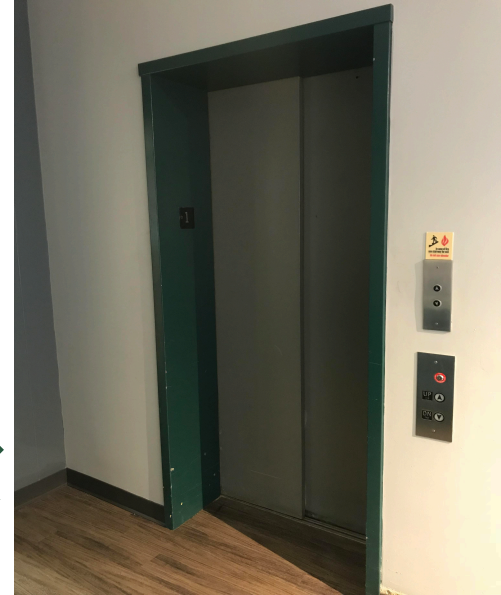

We will go downstairs to get to the lab.
We can take the stairs or the elevator.

When we get downstairs,
I will see a lot of doors.

I may visit three different rooms in this hallway.

In this room, I will play games and answer questions.

My mom or dad
can stay with me
the whole time.

In this room, I will watch short 'movies' with pictures and sounds.

I can sit on my mom or dad's lap while I watch the movies.

Here is another room I might see.

If any brothers or sisters come with me, this is where they will play.

I need a break

At the Lingo Lab, it is ok to take a break whenever I need one.

The people at the Lingo Lab are so happy that I am helping them learn new things!
